** this piece is dependent on your flowers, and the size. Each frame is custom made but will not suit all flowers. Chat to us and we will tell you whether it will work for your bouquet

What you need to know...

Your fresh bouquet will not last forever after your wedding! We aim to get the flowers within 48 hours, and at most within 4 days. If you are in the following counties, we can collect (limited availability) for a nominal fee:

Dublin: €15

Louth: €15

Meath: €15

Kildare: €20

Wicklow: €20

Most hotels and reception venues will be happy to pop your flowers into water for us to collect - just ask them! If you're outside our travel zones, we can help arrange a courier for your precious cargo.

We have a minimum order value of €150 on bridal preservation orders and require a €50 deposit to hold your date.

Drying flowers is a fickle business and whilst we prioritise a reasonable turnaround time (see our notes on the next page), flowers dry at their own pace and are affected by humidity, seasons etc. If you are having a frame made, it will be a handcrafted custom piece and subject again to our suppliers timings.

We will never, ever, complain about being given too many flowers. We encourage you to give us your bouquet plus unity arrangement, or bridesmaid bouquet, or table decorations. This allows us to select the BEST blooms for your piece(s).

Finally, a huge thank you for considering us for your floral preservation.

What you need to know...

Please read through the notes below before booking. It tells you what you need to know about timing, drying flowers and what to expect!

Generally, your bouquet will take around 4 weeks to dry. Once this has happened, it is then queued for your piece. We have a limited number of molds (and space!!) and a large number of bouquets at any given time. Even when the mold becomes free, the piece has to be made, cured, sanded, top-coated, cured again...the cycle continues! Please allow 12 weeks for your finished piece(s) to be returned to you.

As regards the process:

Flowers are natural elements, and Mother Nature is in charge. The processes we use will preserve as much colour as we can, but the colour of a flower is held almost exclusively in the moisture of it. When drying it, we remove the moisture. You may see some colour change to your blooms - some more obvious than others. A few examples:

- red and pink roses are likely to darken. Deep red roses dry to an incredible deep deep violet - almost black tone.
- white flowers may turn a beautiful vintage sepia tone
- very delicate petals such as hydrangeas are highly likely to change in colour, for example a purple hydrangea will usually dry to blue.

Secondly, any 'bruises' the flower has endured will become obvious in resin (we can't see them beforehand). This is a sign that your flowers have been handled and oils have transferred. There are a lot of steps & people involved before you even lay eyes on your bouquet, not to mention the hugs and transferring of your bouquet on your wedding day. These bruises should not be viewed as blemishes, but rather as memories. Let us know if you'd like to see some examples before we proceed with your order, so you know what to expect.

Finally, there are some things that just don't dry, and others that won't press. We will let you know if your bouquet has any of these elements and we can find a way forward together.
